ence of the librarian who delivers the information, not the "extraordinary catalogs, databases, and indexes," will help to "provide visionaries in architecture or any other field," seems pertinent here.

As we look to the future let us also look to the institutions of the future. They may not benefit from the models of the past. Only Richard Dougherty, ironically a former director of libraries both in Berkeley and Ann Arbor which support well-established branch libraries, cautions us against blindly accepting models of the past. "These specialized service outlets have served their purpose well but, as interdisciplinary studies and research have gained greater favor, the ability of small, specialized collections to support such research has diminished." Perhaps a closer look at the interdisciplinary divisional library should be considered for those institutions not already tied to a model.—David L. Austin, University Library, The University of Illinois at Chicago.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

APA's new PsycBOOKS is the first and only annual that gives you access to the latest books and chapters in psychology.

With more and more original research, scholarly contributions, and clinical thought appearing in books, it has become imperative to have a solid reference guide to meet the need for chapter information. PsycBOOKS is the answer.

With PsycBOOKS, you will find an abundance of book and chapter information, including:

- Edited books: Bibliographic citation, List of chapters & their authors and Short statement about content
- Chapters: Reference to edited book in which published and Short statement about content
- Single-author books: Bibliographic citation, Table of Contents and Short statement about content

You will like the convenient subject index terms (the same as those used in Psychological Abstracts) that save time. To make research even easier, PsycBOOKS is conveniently produced in four volumes with topics including:

- Experimental Psychology: Basic and Applied
- Developmental, Personality, and Social Psychology
- Professional Psychology: Disorders and Treatment
- Educational Psychology and Health Psychology

With information on book chapters so difficult to find, you can't afford to miss out on this innovative and extensive reference work. Use the coupon below to find out more about PsycBOOKS today!

Fill In & Mail This Coupon Today!

☐ Yes! I want to know more about PsycBOOKS! Please send me more information.

Name

Address

City State Zip

Mail this coupon to: PsycINFO, American Psychological Association
1400 North Uhle Street, Arlington, VA 22201
or call: (800) 336-4980
(703) 247-7829 in VA or outside the U.S.

Studies in Medieval and Renaissance History, Vol-