THE MIDWINTER MEETING

A.L.A. Reorganization

The 1939 midwinter meeting of the American Library Association will become a landmark in the profession of librarianship, not because it registered the largest attendance on record—over 1000 librarians—but because the A.L.A. Council adopted the final report of the third Activities Committee with only minor revisions. This represents a great achievement. Much credit for what happened is due Charles H. Brown and his committee.

The report represented a reasonable forward step in the improvement of the professional organization of librarians in America and Canada. It was so well received largely because it had been evolved by democratic processes of extensive discussion and conference, thus giving all members and groups in the A.L.A. a hearing.

The meaning of this reorganization of the A.L.A. for the A.C.R.L. and its membership has been outlined by John S. Richards in this issue of the journal.

The interests of college, university, and reference librarians were well represented in the several programs that were developed at the recent midwinter meeting of the A.L.A. At least five sessions were devoted to problems of professional concern to the A.C.R.L. and kindred groups.

Audio-Visual Aids Stressed

The Subsection for Libraries of Teacher-Training Institutions developed a most stimulating program on the subject “Audio-Visual Aids and the Library.” The chief paper at this session by Dr. Shane is published on pages 143-46, 169. Lucy S. Bell, secretary of this Subsection of the A.C.R.L., has supplied the following summary of the round table discussion that followed Dr. Shane’s paper.

“The presiding officer was Donald Bean of the University of Chicago Press, and participants were Mr. V. C. Arnspiger, vice president of the Erpi Classroom Films; Mrs. Lavinia Schwartz of the Columbia Broadcasting System of Chicago; Herman H. Fussler of the University of Chicago Libraries; and Louis Shores of George Peabody College for Teachers.

“All members of the discussion group were in agreement that the care of audio-visual materials was the responsibility of the librarian, and that such materials should not be utilized to replace the book but to enrich and supplement the book collection. With these materials in the library the librarian is able to save the teacher much time, and no overlapping of the function of the book will occur if the librarian is familiar with both fields.

“Mrs. Schwartz, in speaking of radio relationships, made the point that the librarian must be a radio listener and must be familiar with the programs related to the classroom. If her attitude is a sympathetic one, her library service may be increased immeasurably. Dr. Shores suggested that the broadcasting stations do more in preserving famous radio speeches by making permanent victrola records. Mrs. Schwartz replied that this was now being done and that it would be even further developed at a reasonable cost to libraries.

“In the discussion on films in the library, Mr. Arnspiger stated that such material could be used as a springboard into new experiences, but that it should be used for a well defined purpose which both teachers and pupils should know in advance of the showing of the films. He was of the opinion that proper integration throughout the school curriculum could be made only by the librarian who was the one person who could keep in touch with the film production. Mr. Fussler spoke of microfilms as an extension of print in reproducing textual material.

“The discussion was summarized by Mr. Bean in the statement that nothing will ever take the place of the book, but that audio-visual materials, while not a reading process, have an important reading relationship.”
Making and Distribution of Reference Books

Margaret Hutchins, secretary of the Reference Librarians Subsection of the A.C.R.L., reports that at the meeting of that subsection about two hundred and fifty persons listened attentively to addresses by representatives of three well known reference books on "Some Aspects of the Making and Distribution of Reference Books." The speakers, introduced by the chairman, Charles F. McCombs, were Mitford M. Mathews, assistant editor of the Dictionary of American English; Walter Yust, editor of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, whose paper on "The Revision of Encyclopedias" is presented in this issue; and Mr. F. E. Compton, who, with some changes and abridgements, repeated for a more widespread audience the Richard Rogers Bowker Memorial Lecture which he had recently delivered at the New York Public Library on the history of subscription book selling. The reading of the minutes of the San Francisco meeting was dispensed with. The chairman referred to the first issue of College and Research Libraries for a report of the four reference projects presented at that meeting and noted that the H. W. Wilson Company had prepared sample pages of a proposed cumulative biographical service.

Dr. Mathews pointed out that, from the point of view of the lexicographer, the most interesting aspect of dictionary making in the nineteenth century was the utilization of what is known as the historical principle. The great German dictionary embodying this feature was begun in 1838, the beginning of the monumental Dutch work of a corresponding kind came in 1850, the great Oxford English Dictionary was begun in 1858, and the first part of the Swedish historical dictionary appeared in 1893.

The historical method was likewise used in the study of American English when in 1925 Professor William A. Craigie, later Sir William, one of the editors of the Oxford English Dictionary, came to the University of Chicago and began the collecting of material for his dictionary. With the assistance of graduate students and interested volunteers the works of American authors—diaries, court records, magazines, almanacs—were read and excerpts made of words and their contexts to be used in the completed dictionary. After about nine years of collecting, actual editing began in 1934 and the first part appeared soon thereafter. Up to the present eight parts have appeared. It is planned to complete the work within the next three or four years and to bind the twenty parts into four volumes.

About thirty-five members remained for the short business meeting, which was held at the close so as not to detain the speakers. The reading of the minutes of the San Francisco meeting was dispensed with. The chairman referred to the first issue of College and Research Libraries for a report of the four reference projects presented at that meeting and noted that the H. W. Wilson Company had prepared sample pages of a proposed cumulative biographical service.

Mabel L. Conat, member of the A.C.R.L. Publications Committee, outlined the purposes of the new journal, College and Research Libraries, as a medium of (1) communication between subsections, (2) publication of significant papers, (3) news regarding experimentation and research, and, of special interest to reference librarians, (4) reviews of reference books and aids.

Dr. Shores made a general appeal for the help of members of the subsection in bringing to the attention of the editors of the department on reference books and aids not only new publications but also local card indexes in libraries.

On the request of Mary R. Cochran, chairman of the committee appointed in 1937 to represent the interests of reference librarians in the A.L.A. reorganization plans, this committee was discharged by the chairman of the subsection.

Mr. McCombs asked the members of the subsection to send in suggestions of topics for the annual meeting in Cincinnati in May.

College Librarians of the Middle West Dissolve—Back A.C.R.L.

Anna M. Tarr, temporary secretary of the meeting of College Librarians of the Middle West, gives the following account of the session of this group:

"In the absence of Chairman Mary C. Venn, Oberlin, the secretary, Clarence S. Paine, Beloit, called the meeting of the College Librarians of the Middle West to order. The chair appointed Anna M. Tarr, Lawrence, as temporary secretary.

"Joseph Rounds gave a most interesting paper on 'Libraries in a War Economy.' Mr. Rounds was at Geneva the last year and a half and had an opportunity to study and observe both at home and abroad various aspects of world affairs and their effects upon libraries. He urged librarians to re-examine their organizations, and to discover any wastes and inefficiencies in their organizations so that our libraries may be kept open, all essential functions operating in the best possible way.

"Bernard Van Hone, Hayes Memorial Library, Fremont, Ohio, sketched briefly the origin of the Rutherford B. Hayes Library, stating the collection is one of the finest libraries of Americana in this country. The library has been made possible by President Hayes' son, Colonel Webb C. Hayes, who gave the entire collection, with a twenty-five acre estate and a generous endowment to the state of Ohio. The speaker strongly urged librarians to suggest and encourage ways to make this memorial a real bibliographical center on the reconstruction period in the history of the United States.

"The third item of the program was the report of the third Activities Committee in its relation to the college librarians. The panel discussion was led by Errett W. McDiarmid, Jr. The other members on the panel were Mrs. Vera S. Cooper, Mr. G. W. Sandy, and Mr. Paine. Dr. McDiarmid urged college librarians to support the new quarterly, College and Research Libraries, as well as to pay the annual dues of one dollar to the A.C.R.L. He presented the major points of the reorganization committee's report and after discussion and clarifying of questions raised by the panel members the meeting was turned back to the acting chairman.

"In the absence of a nominating committee or any instruction from Chairman Venn, Mr. Paine proposed that Miss Venn be continued as chairman for the coming year.

"Charles H. Brown, Iowa State College, moved that both incumbent officers be reelected. In the absence of any objections the motion was considered as carried.

"Acting upon suggestion from the chair, a brief discussion on dissolving the organization was followed by a motion from Edward A. Henry, University of Cincinnati, that the College Librarians of the Middle West disband and its membership lend all their support to the Association of College and Reference Libraries until such time as that group is functioning at full force under the reorganized A.L.A.

"In the discussion it was emphasized that when and if the time came that a real need was again felt for an organization of middle western college librarians that the present group be reorganized as a section of the A.C.R.L.

"The motion was seconded by Glenn R. Maynard, librarian, Butler University, and carried."

University Libraries Subsection

In the absence of Nathan van Patten, the chairman of the University Libraries Subsection, M. Llewellyn Raney presided at the meeting. The program that had been planned by Dr. van Patten covered two topics: the first embodying a brief survey of the subject of faculty status of members of college and university library staffs by James A. McMillen, whose paper is printed on pages 138-40; the second being a paper on "Higher Education in the Gilded Age" by Stephen A. McCarthy of the University of Nebraska Libraries.

The Association of Research Libraries also held a dinner meeting. This was a closed meeting, open only to representatives of the institutional members of the association and others who had been invited to attend.
